

The New Jersey Do Not Call regulations are working very well in their present form. The quality of family life increased significantly when these regulations were put into place. Ugly commercial intrusions by telephone into our private time and dinner conversations were almost completely eliminated. I do not want them diluted by federal intervention. My impression is that the Bush administration is more interested in enabling big bucks for wealthy business owners than it is in the quality of home and family life. I know what you are up to, and I ask you to back off and let us control against unwanted intrusions into our homes.
